THE LEGISLATURE.

Saturday's sitting of the Legislative Assembly finally disposed of the Internal Tax bill, which was amended to conform to the Act previously passed making personal property pay one per cent on the cash value to sell. It will be remembered that this was fixed in the original bill at three-quarters of one per cent, and upon the third reading it was amended as above stated. If this bill had passed without amendment a conflict would have arisen between the two Acts, and the amount of taxation payable on the valuation would then have been decided by the Supreme Court. This difficulty cannot now arise. The Opposition fought this point to the last, and found supporters among the ranks of the Government party. Considering the strong personal appeals made to members to vote against an increase of taxation, those who stood firm are to be commended for their independence and courage.

The Attorney General introduced a bill to exempt from taxation the personal property of lepers residing at the Kalawao Lepers Settlement. It was read a first and second time and passed to engrossment. This measure was necessary, inasmuch as the Tax Assessor had assessed all the personal property at the Settlement to the owners, and there was no relief possible, as the law did not make an exception in their favor. As these unfortunate people are supposed to be civilly dead, their little property should at least be exempt from taxation. The Government lost no time, upon the fact being reported, to take the necessary steps to afford relief. This will be appreciated by the lepers themselves and their friends.

The Opium bill did not come up for discussion. This was a disappointment, doubtless, to several ladies and gentlemen who were in attendance during most part of the sitting. It will probably come up to-day. Touching the substitute bill reported by the committee, and which is now before the House, it is proper to say that it differs widely on some material points from the original bill referred to it. So much is this the case that we hesitate to say whether, in our judgment, it should be passed or not. Readers of the Advertiser had an opportunity of perusing it in our issue of Saturday, and forming their own judgment upon its merits. It certainly would not stop smuggling, and it is doubtful whether it would add very materially to the revenue. The effectual regulation of the opium traffic by law, and the suppression of opium smuggling, are the two points to be aimed at, and incidental thereto, the question of revenue comes in. We await the debate upon the substitute bill to form a decided opinion on these points, however; but as we now regard it we are inclined to think that the bill as it stands would be a comparative failure.

Presentation of a Hawaiian Flag by His Majesty the King.

Yesterday about noon His Majesty the King, accompanied by the Hon. John A. Cummins, paid an informal visit to the Oceanic Company's steamship Australia. His Majesty was received on board by Captain Webber, the popular commander of the Australia, and escorted to the spacious saloon, where preparations had been made for an interesting ceremony. This was the presentation of a handsome Hawaiian ensign by His Majesty to Captain Webber, who was starting upon the pioneer voyage to Australia in command of an ocean-going steamship sailing under the Hawaiian flag. The presentation was made by His Majesty in a few appropriate remarks. He then called upon the Hon. Paul Neumann to speak to the importance of this trade opening in its relation to the commercial interests of the Hawaiian Kingdom. Mr. Neumann responded to the command of His Majesty in a neat and suggestive speech, in which due tribute was paid to the enterprise and public spirit of the owners of the Australia, who are building up the mercantile marine of the Hawaiian Islands, developing its commerce, and bringing them into close and intimate business relations with the great and growing states of British origin in the South Pacific. The Australian Colonies and New Zealand were very closely allied to the mother country, England, a power which had done much for Hawaii in times past, and which was doubtless prepared to continue its kindly offices of friendship, and, if need be of aid, in the future. It was a great event in the history of Hawaiian commerce when such a splendid steamship as the Australia sailed under the Hawaiian flag to the British Colonies in the southern hemisphere. She was the first of what would doubtless be a numerous fleet of vessels carrying the Hawaiian flag to the southern seas. Let them join in wishing a prosperous voyage to Captain Webber, and complete success to the Oceanic Steamship Company, the owners of the vessel.

Captain Webber thanked His Majesty for his gracious condescension in presenting him with so handsome a flag.

The Hawaiian ensign was recognized everywhere as one of the handsomest of ensigns on the high seas, and it would be his pride and pleasure, while sailing under such a beautiful flag, to endeavor to deserve the approval and commendation of His Majesty and all his subjects, as well as those from other countries travelling by his vessel. (Applause).

Hon. Wm. G. Irwin remarked that Colonel Spreckels was prevented being present upon this interesting occasion on account of illness. He would otherwise have taken part in the ceremony they had just witnessed.

Captain Webber then invited His Majesty and the distinguished party present to go on deck and witness the ceremony of hoisting the Hawaiian flag at the main. The adjournment to the spar deck followed, and when the national ensign floated in the breeze, it was greeted with three cheers by the spectators, followed by three lusty cheers for His Majesty the King. The flag is of silk, eight feet by five feet, and is a beautiful specimen of work.

In addition to the through passengers by the Australia there were present during the proceedings in the saloon and on the spar deck, His Majesty the King, His Excellency Robt. J. Creighton, Minister of Foreign Affairs; His Excellency Governor Curtis P. Iaukea, His Majesty's Chamberlain; Hon. Colonel Geo. W. Macfarlane, of His Majesty's staff; Hon. Major Samuel Parker and Major W. H. Cornwell, Esquiers; to His Majesty; Hon. John A. Cummins, Hon. Wm. G. Irwin, Hon. Paul Neumann, Quartermaster General S. Nowlein, Mr. Henry Turton, Mr. E. C. Macfarlane, etc. The occasion was an exceedingly agreeable one, and appeared to be cordially appreciated by all the Australian passengers. Quite a number of ladies resident in Honolulu were also on board. The Australia sailed a full ship with cargo and a fair passenger list, and bore with her the aloha of all.

Opium Seizures.

The Deputy Sheriff of Kauai, with two of his assistants, recently made raid upon a Chinese opium den, which has hitherto been known as a rice plantation, and 22 tins of the drug were seized. They were the property of a well-known Chinaman, who was supposed to be above such a month's imprisonment, in addition to a fine of $250.

On Thursday, October 7th, while Mr. Henry Turton, Deputy Sheriff of Maui, was returning from Lahaina to Wailuku, at midnight, he met two Chinamen on horseback on the top of the Lahaina mountain, and searching their saddlebags found fifty tins of opium. He took them back to Wailuku and locked them up. They had not been tried when the steamer left.
